What's Ahead:

- What is sextortion?
- How does it start?
- How do I know who can be trusted online?
- What do I do if this is happening to me?
- How can I help someone else who is in this situation?
- How do I protect myself and my friends?
- What can I do if I am sexually assaulted?
- What can I do if I experience or witness sexual harassment?

What is Sextortion?

- The FBI defines sextortion as a crime that happens online when an adult convinces a person who is younger than 18 to share sexual pictures or perform sexual acts on a webcam.
 - The FBI is seeing an alarming increase in cases.
 - These predators have developed tactics that allow them to exploit youths through a connected device, within their own homes.
- The strategies presented here can help you defend against sextortion by a perpetrator of any age.

How Does it Start?

- Sextortion can start on any online platform where people meet and communicate. Someone may contact you:
 - While you are playing a game online
 - Over a dating app
 - Through one of your social media accounts

How Does it Start?

- In some cases, the first contact from the criminal will be a threat. The person may claim they already have a picture or video of you that they will share unless you send more pictures.
- More often, however, this crime starts when you believe you are communicating with someone your own age who is interested in a relationship or with someone who is offering something of value.

How Does it Start?

- To get you to share these images, the adult may use:
 - threats
 - gifs
 - money
 - flattery

- After the criminal has one or more videos or pictures, they use the threat of sharing or publishing them to get more from you.

- The adult has committed a crime as soon as they ask a young person for a single graphic image.

How Do Perpetrators Do This?

- The people who commit this crime have studied how to reach and target children and teens.
- In some specific cases perpetrators:
 - Created social media profiles pretending to be a teenager, then talked to teens online and encouraged them to make videos
 - Offered money and new smartphones
 - Threatened a girl—saying he would hurt her and bomb her school—if she didn't send pictures
 - Offered currency or credits in a video game in exchange for a quick picture

Talk About It

- Has anyone you don't know ever tried to contact or talk to you while you were online?
- Did you ever suspect it was an adult pretending to be a teen?
- What did you do or what would you do if that happened?
- Why do you think an adult would want to engage with a youth online?

Who Can Be Trusted Online?

- It's not easy to know who you can trust online. The FBI has found that those who commit this crime may have dozens of different online accounts and profiles and are communicating with many young people at the same time—trying to find victims.
- Be extremely cautious about sharing personal information when you are speaking with someone online who you have not met in real life
 - It's easy to think: "I'm on my phone, in my own house, what could possibly happen?"
 - But you can very quickly give a criminal the information and material they need to do you harm.
 - Avoid sharing any personal information: your full name, location/address, school, age/grade, friends' names, etc.

But How Can This Harm Me?

- Even if these criminals don't meet up with youth in real life, the victims of this crime still experience serious negative effects.
- The criminals can become vicious and non-stop with their demands, harassment, and threats.
- Victims report feeling scared, alone, embarrassed, anxious, and desperate.
- Many feel like there's no way out of the situation.

What Do I Do if This is Happening to Me?

- Go to a trusted adult for help and advice. Tell them you are being victimized online and need their help to make it stop.
 - It may seem like an impossible situation and talking about this can be frightening, but there are people who can help.
 - You are not the one in trouble.
- Another option is to contact the National Center for Missing & Exploited Children at 1-800-THE-LOST (843-5678) or online.
- When you are ready, reach out to the FBI at 1-800-CALL-FBI (225-5324) or report the crime online.
 - FBI agents see these cases a lot and have helped thousands of young people.
 - Their goals are to stop the harassment and help you get the support you need.

Will I Be in Trouble?

- > No. You are not the one who is breaking the law.
- > This situation can feel confusing. Criminals count on you feeling too unsure, scared, or embarrassed to tell someone about the situation.
- > You are not the one who is in trouble, even if:
 - You were on an app or site that you're too young to be on
 - You felt okay about making some of the content
 - You accepted money or a game credit or something else of value

Sextortion is a crime because it is illegal and wrong for an adult to ask for, pay for, or demand graphic images from a minor!

How Can I Help Someone Else Who is in This Situation?

- > Here are things you can do if you learn a friend, classmate, or family member is being victimized:
- Listen to them with kindness and understanding.
 - Tell them you are sorry that this is happening to them and ask them if you can offer to help.
 - Let them know that they are the victim of a crime and have not done anything wrong.
 - Encourage them to ask for help and offer to help them identify a trusted adult who can provide assistance.

How Do I Protect Myself and My Friends?

Protect yourself and friends through awareness and sensible safety practices online – and be willing to ask for help!

- 1 Be selective about what you share online. If your social media accounts are open to everyone, a predator may be able to figure out a lot about you.
- 2 Be wary of anyone you encounter for the first time online. If it feels wrong, trust your gut and don't feel obliged to be polite. Block or ignore messages from strangers.
- 3 Be aware that people can pretend to be anything or anyone online. Videos and photos are not proof that a person is who they claim to be. Images can be altered or stolen.

How Do I Protect Myself and My Friends?

- 4 Be suspicious if you meet someone on one platform and they ask you to start talking to them privately on a different platform.
- 5 Be mindful that any content you create online—whether it is a text message, photo, or video—can be made public. Once you send something, you have lost control over where it goes next.
- 6 Be willing to ask for help. If you are getting messages or requests online that don't seem right, block the sender, report the behavior to the site administrator and/or go to a trusted adult for guidance. If you think you have been victimized online, tell someone immediately.

Talk About It

- Have you or your friends taken steps to protect yourselves and if so, what were they?
- What would you do if you learned a friend were being victimized in this way?
- Does your school have resources or staff for students to get help if they are experiencing sextortion?

Do More:

- > What can you suggest to help educate others in your school or community about sextortion?
 - Who at your school is the contact for this issue?
 - Who in the community would you contact?

- > Can everyone here share one thing they learned today and one thing they will commit to doing to move forward?

To Do Immediately if Sexually Assaulted

- > Get away from the attacker to a safe place as fast as you can.
- > Then call 911 or the police.
- > Call a friend or family member you trust.
- > You can call a crisis center or hotline to talk with a counselor.
- > One 24/7 option, for all genders, is the Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network (RAINN) National Sexual Assault Hotline at 800-656-HOPE(4673).
- > RAINN will connect you with a rape crisis center in your area.
- > Visit the Survivor Support page for more helpline options and details.

To Do Immediately if Sexually Assaulted

- > Preserve the evidence, even if you are unsure you will report.
- > Do not:
 - Wash, comb your hair, or clean any part of your body
 - Brush your teeth
 - Change clothes, if possible, so the hospital nurse can collect evidence
 - Touch or change anything at the scene of the assault
- > Seek medical attention ASAP at your nearest hospital ER:
 - You need to be examined, treated for any injuries, checked for possible sexually transmitted infections (STIs) or pregnancy, and can receive preventative medicine.
 - The nurse or doctor will collect evidence the attacker may have left behind.
- > Ask hospital staff to connect you with a local rape crisis center.

If You are Sexually Harassed

It isn't your fault... and you can get help to make it stop.

- Reach out ASAP to a friend, school counselor or trusted adult for immediate safety & support to bring the issue to your Dean of Students, Principal, or Title IX Coordinator.
